

FOR THE POOR SICK CHILDREN.
THE EVENING WORLD, with a subscription of $100, hereby opens a popular fund to provide a corps of free physicians for the exclusive treatment of the poor sick children during the torrid days of the coming Summer.
It will be remembered that last Summer THE EVENING WORLD provided one physician for this purpose. His efforts were remarkably successful, as will appear from his official report, which is reprinted in another column. But it was found that one doctor could cover but a very small portion of the great field for such humane work in this metropolis. Therefore an effort will be made now to establish a full corps of such physicians for the present season.

THE EVENING WORLD does not hesitate to ask the co-operation of the public in this philanthropic work. Indeed, scores of readers volunteered financial assistance last year for the extension of the good work, but the season was so far advanced that it was impracticable to accede to their desire.

This year everybody will have a chance to contribute to the philanthropic enterprise, and the more contributors there are the more numerous will be the corps of the babies' free physicians and the larger the number of little lives saved.

This subscription should be an eminently popular one—as popular as the object itself. The five, ten and twenty dollar bills will not be declined, but the dollars, the halves, the quarters and the dimes are particularly desired. There is hardly any one who cannot spare something towards such a work. Everybody who is contemplating a Summer outing will in this way be able to give a zest to their own pleasure by the knowledge that they have done something to relieve the terrible suffering and to reduce the frightful death rate among the children of the hot tenements during the Summer.

THE EVENING WORLD never presents a good cause to its readers in vain. So let the dollars and the dimes roll in at a lively rate. There is no time to lose.

OCEAN RACING.
The eager race for the title of "Queen of the Ocean," now in progress among ocean steamers, may some day result in an awful catastrophe.

The machinery of some would-be queen will give out at a critical moment, a collision will occur or some other accident will cause loss of life, and then, instead of the plaudits the ambitious owners and officers so eagerly covet, there will be wrathful condemnation for recklessness.

Isn't it better that human freight be transported across the seas with more safety than with less speed?

THE COURT PHYSICIAN.
The Coroner who is conducting the inquest in the FENNEY case seems to think that all the medical knowledge worth having is enveloped in one Dr. FENNEY. He is the court physician. No matter what other scientific man may say, it goes for nothing with the Coroner if it contravenes FENNEY's theory.

So dazzled is the Coroner with the brilliancy of Dr. FENNEY's attainments that he forgets that an inquest is held for the purpose of ascertaining the cause of death from all the light attainable. He seems to be holding this inquest merely to find out what Dr. FENNEY thinks.

Suppose Dr. FENNEY is mistaken. What if he is deficient as a pathologist? Can it be possible that even a physician can be induced to sustain a theory that might shield somebody? These are questions uppermost in the public mind.

The disagreements of doctors are too frequent for people to pin their faith absolutely to one. Come, Mr. Coroner, let's have less of Dr. FENNEY and more of other evidence.

THE SUICIDE EPIDEMIC.
The number of suicides recorded during the past few weeks is appalling to contemplate. Self-murder seems to have become an epidemic. In most of the cases the moving cause has been impetuosity, from one reason and another.

What a terrible story of blasted hopes, ruined lives, suffering and despair these suicides tell. In how many instances the outstretching of a friendly hand, the giving of a little by those who have much, and the practice of the Golden Rule by their acquaintances might have inspired hope and courage in the breasts of those who for want of it died to escape the further wounds of cruel fate.

What a pity it is that in this world men should, for very want of that which others waste and do not prize, be frenzied and madly leap into eternity. But so it goes.

FOR SICK BABES.

"The Evening World" Starts a Popular Subscription with $100.

The Fund Will Be Devoted to a Free Corps of Physicians for the Sick Children of the Tenements.

Let Everybody Contribute to the Noble Work and Reduce the Terrible Midsummer Death-Rate.

All Subscriptions Will Be Promptly Acknowledged—Dollars, Halves, Quarters and Dimes Particularly Desired.

What One "Evening World" Physician Accomplished Last Summer.

THE EVENING WORLD, with a contribution of $100, opens a popular subscription to-day to provide a corps of free physicians to treat the destitute and sick children of the tenements during the coming torrid season.

The object of this fund will appeal to everybody's sympathies, and it is to be hoped that it will be increased to creditable proportions without unnecessary delay.

All invited to subscribe according to their means and inclination. No subscription will be declined because of its amount, and our wealthy readers need not hesitate to open their pocket-books. But it is particularly intended to make this a popular subscription, and the contributions of one dollar, halves, quarters and dimes are especially desired. Every contribution received will be promptly acknowledged.

The amount of good work that can be done by a well-equipped corps of such physicians can hardly be overestimated. It is quite possible for the readers of THE EVENING WORLD to save hundreds of little human lives this Summer by generous and concerted action.

As an example of what one free doctor can do in this line, the official report of THE EVENING WORLD physician last summer is herewith reproduced. He found it impossible to cover more than a very small section of the immense field for such work, but doubtless scores of little lives were prolonged by his professional treatment.

"The Evening World" Doctor's Report.
(From The Evening World, Wednesday Evening, Aug. 29, 1888.)
To the Editor of The Evening World:

Herewith is a brief summary of the work done by me in behalf of THE EVENING WORLD to relieve the sick children of the poor.

The work was commenced on Monday, July 16, and ended Friday, Aug. 24. Every day during this time, except Sundays, a large part of my time was devoted to the work.

The little incidents that occurred, the stories of poverty and wretchedness, the bright sayings of the children, the mothers' expressions of gratitude to THE EVENING WORLD, the pastimes and toys of the poor children, the bundles of clothing by kind hands, and their distribution, the daily life of the sick babies and their surroundings, have all been graphically and truthfully described from day to day by the reporters.

The tenements visited were in the poorest localities on Goerck street, Livingston street, Delancey street, Lewis street, Cherry street (Cherry Hill), Batavia street, Water street, Front street, Roosevelt street, James street, Oliver street, Oak street, Madison street, Jackson street, New Chambers street, Park street, Franklin street, Beach street, Mulberry street (The Bend), Washington street, Greenwich street, Cedar street and Albany street. Besides a few isolated houses in streets further uptown where special requests for THE EVENING WORLD physician had been sent.

A number of houses were visited several times where there were sick children who needed to be seen more than once.

Five hundred and sixty-two families were called upon and medical aid offered. The number of patients on the memorandum is 238. They were mostly babies under two and one-half years.

Many of the diseases of childhood were seen and treated, but intestinal disorders—diarrhea, dysentery, cholera infantum, and the like—were the most common in young children during the hot weather, and in which prompt treatment is so invaluable—occupied much of my attention.

Among these patients there were three deaths to record. There may possibly have been more, which were lost sight of by people moving and other circumstances which made it impossible to trace them.

There are a few little patients who have not entirely recovered, and who ought to be seen a few more times. I would recommend that, although the work for the Summer is finished, some provision be made to look after these children until they are well, which will probably be in another week, if all goes well.

Bronze Medal for Miss Abrahams.
Miss Anna Alida Abrahams, the young woman who made the address of welcome on behalf of the students of the Normal College to President Harrison at the City Hall on April 29, has received a handsome bronze medal from the Centennial Committee as a souvenir of the occasion. It was accompanied by the following letter:

New York, May 16, 1889.
My Dear Miss Abrahams:
In behalf of the Centennial Committee I herewith send you a medal commemorative of the Centennial celebration of the City of New York, and in appreciation of the services rendered by you on the occasion of your visit to the City of New York, April 29, 1889.

That you may long be the possessor of it is the wish of your truly,
W. G. HAMILTON,
Chairman Centennial Committee on States.

CLAMOR AT THE BANK.

A Crowd of Noisy Depositors Anxious After Their Savings.
Broker Goldberger Missing from His Greenwich Street Office.

The Bookkeeper Says There Is Little Left for Them but the Chairs.

There is waiting and gnashing of teeth among the four hundred or more depositors of Max Goldberger's "Magyar Bank and Exchange," at 103 Ridge street.

Banker Max has not been seen in town since a week ago Wednesday and his bank suspended payment on Tuesday, when his wife cleared out of the Ridge street building and moved up to Seventy-seventh street.

The business has been transferred to the branch office at 103 Greenwich street, where Bookkeeper Herman Wiesenberg is in charge of affairs and is trying his best to save of the throngs of indignant depositors who flock to the office to get news of Goldberger, and threaten dreadful things if he doesn't come and pay them their savings.

From a hasty examination of the accounts Bookkeeper Wiesenberg estimated that the liabilities are about $11,000, and that there are some assets in the shape of furniture, stocks, money orders and registered letters, so that the depositors may get something.

He is as much surprised at Goldberger's disappearance as any one else, and when he went away last week he believed that he was going down to Pennsylvania, where he had large interests.

Things had been looking badly for some time past, as Goldberger had lost large sums of money in speculating in European securities, and several of his agents, whom he had trusted with steamship tickets, the selling of which was a part of his business, had defected and left him in the lurch after he had paid the steamship companies for the tickets.

Still the depositors in the bank await their 4 per cent. interest, and the business from this source seemed to be as good as over. The depositors were mostly Magyar and Polish immigrants, who put implicit confidence in Goldberger and trusted him with all their savings.

The individual accounts range from $10 up to $200, and as they come from the very poorest classes the loss is bitter.

This morning there was a noisy crowd in the little office in Greenwich street. Everybody was talking at once in the Magyar and Polish dialects, and the poor bookkeeper found it hard work to keep his wits about him.

Every one asked the same questions and he told the same story, that he didn't know where Goldberger was, and couldn't tell them how much of their money they would get back.

He had a pocketful of checks and postal orders (uncashed which belong to the assets, but as no legal steps have been taken to wind up the business of the bank he refuses to give them out. None of the depositors have made any complaint, and the all seem to think that Goldberger will come back sooner or later and give them their money.

A letter-carrier came in this morning with a package of registered letters for Goldberger, but Wiesenberg refused to receive them. He would only be responsible for the assets that came into his hands at the time the suspension was announced.

This was on Tuesday morning when Mrs. Goldberger, who had been living at the Ridge street house, told Wiesenberg to shut up the bank and wind up the business as she was going to move out.

She declined to say where her husband had gone, and it is believed that he is now safe over the Canadian border, and that she will soon join him.

Through his agents Goldberger secured a great many depositors from among the Hungarian emigrants in the Lehigh Valley, to many of whom he had sold tickets to come to this country. It is said that these are the heaviest creditors, but the New York contingent is very large and very hungry.

Goldberger has been in the banking business eleven years. He has had his principal office at 103 Ridge street for six years, and opened his branch in Greenwich street two years ago. Previous to that he had run a bank for several years in Houston street.

Bookkeeper Wiesenberg has been in his employ for two years, and says that although he would like his employer's speculative career, he thought he had lost too heavily that the interests of the bank's depositors had been endangered. They will be hardly got five cents back, and when they realize this fact there will be a big howl for Goldberger's scalp. It is suspected that Goldberger managed in some singular real estate transactions before he went away, and there is a possibility that the creditors may have the conveyance of his house in Ridge street set aside and realize something from it.

THE DOCTOR HAS HER CHILD.
He Refuses to Surrender It Without the Court's Sanction.

Judge Ingraham has issued a writ of habeas corpus requiring Dr. Eugene L. Brievogelle, of 324 Ninth avenue, to produce Louisa, the six-week-old daughter of Mary Haas, who the mother claims is being wrongfully withheld from her.

The mother was confined on April 8, and Dr. Brievogelle attended her. After the birth, the doctor says, the mother was paid $50 to relinquish all claim to the infant. The only condition being that it should be placed in a Catholic institution.

Summer Suits for Men and Boys at Phenomenally Low Prices.

The culture and refinement of a people are shown in their mode and style of dress. In no country is this truth better illustrated than in the United States, nor in any city better than in New York. Pre-eminent among caterers to the public taste in this direction has been the London and Liverpool Clothing House, Nos. 86 and 88 Bowers. This establishment has for years stood in the front rank of its trade, and, judging from its present methods of doing business, is likely to remain there. It has long been celebrated for the quality and cut of its goods. Since the Centennial year its business has taken a phenomenal jump upward. In its large show-rooms are all made of imported cheviot, satin lined, with all the latest patterns, stripes, checks, &c., and are all marked at $8.50 apiece.

This is not all. Fashionable summer hats can be found at nominal prices, fine dress shirts at $2.00, and small necks, $5.50.
